AFTER NINE MONTHS' VOYAGE SCHOONER ARRIVES IN DISTRESS

Gamble Here for Water and Supplies — Carried Lumber to South Africa — Three Inter-Island Departures Today. Mauna Kea Brought Large List of Passengers — Tears and Leis Mingle at Departure of Pacific Mailer Nile for Oriental Ports

The little six hundred ton schooner Gamble, flying the American colors, appeared off the harbor late yesterday afternoon, her skipper C. H. Chase, sending up signals of distress.

A visit made the little vessel developed the fact that the Gamble was very short of provisions. Captain Chase sought fresh supplies of water and certain lines of groceries and meats.

The Gamble sailed from Port Gamble, a Puget Sound lumber center, on the 27th of last November. Laden to the limit with timber, the vessel proceeded to Algoa Bay, on the coast of South Africa. Following the discharge of cargo, Captain Chase with his command put to sea on the 28th of last March. From that date he has met with unfortunate weather conditions in that adverse winds brought about a very slow and tedious passage.

The skipper and his crew of white sailors appeared quite contented with their lot when the schooner was visited by the customs and quarantine officers yesterday.

Captain Chase came into the city, while his vessel swings at anchor outside the harbor limits.

The Gamble is bound for San Francisco. The vessel is proceeding to the California port in ballast. The skipper stated today that he had hoped for a far more favorable wind during the remainder of his passage.

"Had my ship been on the coast at the present time, I would have captured a profitable charter with high rates of tonnage now prevailing at sound ports," he said.

Sugar En Route to the Coast. Sugar amounting to 12,000 sacks taken aboard at Kawahai arrived at the port this morning as part cargo in the Inter-Island steamer Helene. This vessel returned with 400 sacks seed cane, one mill roller, and 16 packages sundries. Purser Peake reports fine weather along the Hamakua coast, and in returning to port, the Helene met with light winds and smooth seas.

Cattle to the number of sixty head arrived from Hawaii this morning in the steamer Maui. This vessel brought other lines of cargo including shipments of wood and sundries. According to a report from Purser Fitzsimmons, the vessel met with smooth seas and light winds on the homeward voyage.

SAN FRANCISCAN LURED BY GOLD

Lured by stories of fabulous wealth to be gained in the mountains back of Ipanama, N. P. Jensen, a former seafarer, and his wife, residents of this city, journeyed to the little republic only to encounter great hardships and suffer the loss of a large share of their savings. They returned to San Francisco this morning on the Pacific Mail steamer City of Para, after their coffee plantation and home had been destroyed by fire, and when conditions in the mountains assumed serious proportions, says the S. E. Bulletin.

Jensen and his wife journeyed over a dangerous mountain trail thirty-two miles in length to a place called Boquette, in the Chiriqui Province. The land selected for the plantation was reported to have suffered from several months of dry weather.

Six weeks ago fire destroyed 3,500 coffee trees, including the homes of twelve American settlers. When the fire was first discovered the Alcalde was appealed to, but refused aid.

Feast Before Fire.

"It was during feast day," said Jensen, "and the official said that the fire was of small import as compared with the reign of gavoty which he had inaugurated. He told us he would not think of spoiling the feasting by ordering his people to join in fighting a fire."

The result was that the American settlers lost everything. Mrs. Jensen, who was ill at the time, had to be assisted from her home before the flames reached it, and later was carried back over the mountain trail on a horse. She was still suffering from her experiences when the Para came into port today.

Fires have also occurred recently in David and Neoshooper, and great loss has been entailed by the natives. A Panamanian woman and her child were burned to death in the fire at Neoshooper and a number of cattle killed.

At David the pastures were destroyed by the flames, and the people have been living on short rations of beans and rice for weeks. Conditions will be more serious next season, and Jensen said that many were leaving these places.

Land sharks were responsible for bringing people into Panama, said Jensen, and then deceiving them with tales of fortunes to be gained in the mountains. Of late the government officials have been attempting to put a stop to their operations.

During a performance in a theater in Gitschin, Bohemia, an actress named Ruska, a Japanese, was shot and instantly killed an actor named Wreba and then committed suicide.

Alberta Charles of Sheridan, Wyo., has completed her $100-mile journey across the continent riding a pony and accompanied only by her dog.

Mr. Bonnet, a parachute jumper of St. Johnsbury, Mass., was seriously injured in Lynn when his parachute failed to work.

Race War Predicted. As a result of the recent withdrawal of the Blue Funnel Line from the trans-Pacific freight rate conference, race war is anticipated among the steamship lines engaged in traffic between American ports and the Orient.

As far as the National Guard, the Hilo Band and the fire department, there will be a parade. The band will lead the procession, and the whole bunch will make its way down to McWayne Park, where the sports for children and the competitive drill for the bremen will take place.

The failure to have the gate and float parade was caused by the lack of entries in the several classes. The committee in charge decided that it would be better to have no floats than to have an affair that would make the holiday people and other visitors callous.

BORTON, Mrs., June 16. No one trying, you can't keep the gate down. The electric road of the State has received recognition among the arts. It took its place in the theater, and close to the stage too, when P. K. Smith and associates reopened the National Theater in Tremont street, the largest theater in Boston, as the National Theater Gardens. Twelve rows of orchestra seats had been taken out and boxes seating eight, with a table in each, were in their place.

Beams hot, cold and medium, but all the time Boston style, were on hand. They were to be had in dandy alabamas de Rose, as it were, but all the beams.

The beams were prepared in daily bakery behind a screen. It was a great night for the beam, of course. There were other refreshments, but beans had the chief place.
